CATEGORY DEFINITIONS

The criteria for the Awards are that the candidate must be a dog that has been rescued from a SPCA, Humane Society, stray or an inspector seizure. The dog needs to exemplify an outstanding bond between the owner and the dog as well as the community in which they live. The dog may be honored posthumously or currently living with its owner.

In 2011 while reading through all of the nominations for the Clancy Memorial Award it became clear that there was only one Clancy, yet all of the dogs nominated for the Award had a "part of her" in their lives. Thus it became evident that besides the Memorial Award, there should be three other awards as well: The Clancy Community Spirit, Service, and Unsung Hero Awards

CLANCY MEMORIAL AWARD

The Clancy Memorial Award was set up to honour my dog Clancy, who was not only my companion and service dog, but also my heart and soul. She was not just a dog, but rather my best friend and 'soul dog'. It is this connection that I want to celebrate with others, and hear their stories of undying love and devotion that they experienced with their dogs, as I had with Clancy. This is the foundation of the Clancy Memorial Award.

Each year's winner is to exemplify the Spirit of Clancy. A spirit that would never quit under any circumstance, a spirit that was always attentive to my needs and would always pick me up on days that I struggled to go on, a dog that positively impacted someone's life.

COMMUNITY SPIRIT AWARD

The Community Spirit Award exemplifies a dog that is untrained and has a natural tendency to give of itself to help others within their community. Examples are therapy dogs, education/advocacy dogs or dogs that have a natural inclination to help others within their community.

SERVICE AWARD

The Service Award exemplifies a dog that undergoes extensive training in order to carry out a specific task that benefits the community in which they live. Examples are service dogs, fire accelerant detection, bomb and drug detection, search & rescue to name a few.

UNsung HERO AWARD

The Unsung Hero Award exemplifies the life of a dog that has shown extraordinary acts of bravery and heroism, which have saved human lives.
